Reading 2

Q1. What are the differences between site specific artwork and the idea of art interventions?

Site-specific art is artwork created to exist in a certain place

Art intervention is an interaction with a previously existing artwork, audience, venue/space or situation.

Q2. What are the similarities and differences regarding the art work of Robert Irwin, Walter De Maria, Banksy, and Robert Montgomery?

I noticed that with Robert Irwin, Walter De Maria, Banksy, Robert Montgomery, their works are usually site-related artworks. Although they all work on a site, their artworks are not always the same. The difference among them are their art style as well as the way they interact with that site. For example, Banksy usually draws on the wall on the street, while Robert Irwin's art feels like an experiment and experience in that place. I think these artists work with space in a creative way

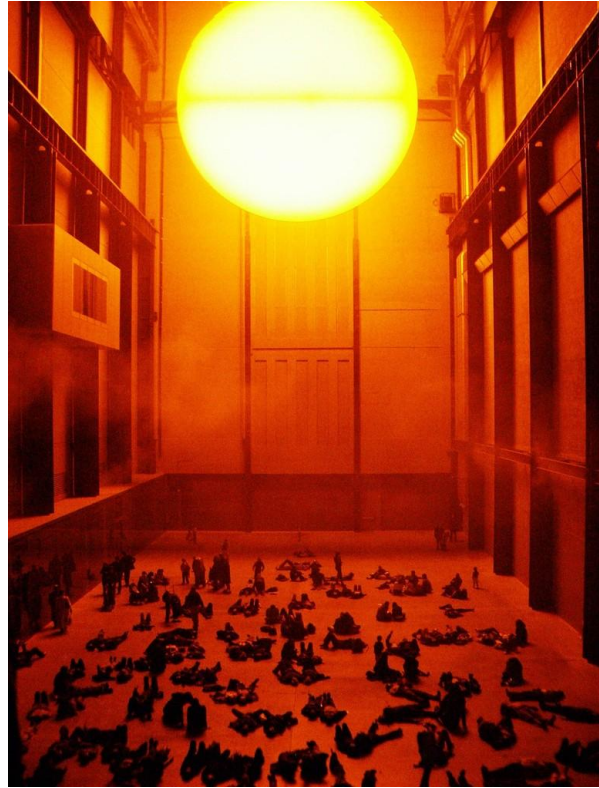

Q3. What are the main characteristics that separate something being any kind of art versus what all signs must share to be relevant or meaningful? This means ALL signs, from art signs to traffic signs, to signs even in our home.

Art sites and street signs are different because all signs are site-specific and widely comprehensive. Art signs on the other hand are more creative and unique and not always site-specific like the street signs

Q4. What Kind of art, (not shown here), have you seen that was made in response to its location, its environment, a specific event or situation. Please elaborate on its description and provide images if possible.

Olafur Eliasson: The Weather Project

This project is done at the Turbine Hall at Tate Modern. To me, it is similar to Robert Irwin art installations. In this project, he made use of the space and created a very dynamic environment of the sun. He used the type of light that cancels out every color and turns everything black. Belows are the images from the project.

Q5. In class exercise. (In class on October 18th)

I usually go to the 99 ranch market and always have a hard time finding parking. My sign idea is to address the situation there where there are lots of shopping carts in the parking spot.

Ian goes to the park near his house as it is a wide-open space where he can experience the sun sets.

Lynn goes to the malls because she works there. The mall has wifi connected but never working so she wants to create a sign that talks about that.
